

MANY PLEAD GUILTY

And Saved Time and Trouble in the Police Court Today.

Drink Was the Cause of Most of the Cases—There Were Thirty-four Prisoners.

Thirty-four prisoners answered roll call in the Police Court this morning, the number being about one-half that usual. The business of the court was held in regular session.

Women were present in the minority this week, probably for the reason that so many of them were sent down last week and their terms of imprisonment have not yet expired.

Bailiff King went into the cell room as soon as court opened and recorded the names of those present.

The session of the court was considerably shortened because of the number of pleas of guilty, and of those tried only a few escaped punishment.

Dave Johnson was the first man arraigned, charged with him having disturbed the quiet of B street southwest.

"I'm guilty," responded Dave, and "me too."

No testimony was heard in the case and the court imposed the usual $50 fine.

Miss Elizabeth Johnson, a young colored woman, was under the influence of liquor and she remained in the house, but like most others under the influence of liquor her tongue could not be used and so a policeman was attracted to the house.

"I don't know nothin'," was Lizzy's plan to the police, who asked her what she could not help but say. She continued to argue the neighborhood on her way to the station. Upon her arrival there she was so drunk and so bad-tempered that she was mained dead to the world until the "Mark" called for her this morning. Then with the usual ceremony she was taken to the court to repeat her last night's conduct.

"I'm guilty," she replied to the charge, and when the judge said "yes" she stepped back and said "I'm sorry that made her headache seem like a thing of the past."

Hilly Neal was the name of the next prisoner and his appearance was that of a man who had been to the fair.

"I'm guilty," he said.

You are shown with having obstructed the justice of your neighbor, the clerk," "Are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty," was the reply of the man, who admitted he was drinking from his last night's earnings and he stopped back in default of the usual fine.

"What is the charge?" asked the court. "Throwing missiles." was the reply.

"I'm guilty," he said.

"No sir."

"Three dollars."

He Guessed Right.

Burt Davis was the name given by a man who had been arrested on the Bladensburg road, and the clerk to him "are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty, I guess," was his response.

One guess was enough as his appearance was enough to assure the court that his guess was not mistaken.

Daniel Buchanan has been in court more than half a dozen times and he is still here.

"I'm guilty," he said.

"You are shown with having obstructed the justice of your neighbor, the clerk," "Are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty," was the reply of the man, who admitted he was drinking from his last night's earnings and he stopped back in default of the usual fine.

Frank Lucas was the name given by a man who had been arrested on the Bladensburg road, and the clerk to him "are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty, I guess," was his response.

One guess was enough as his appearance was enough to assure the court that his guess was not mistaken.

Wanted—A YOUNG COLORED GIRL, FOR

WORK, $100 per month, to work on the street, and the usual fine was imposed.

The color of Emma English's face gave evidence of the expenditure of many dimes to give weeks in the rose hue. Vagrancy was the charge against her, and she said "not guilty."

"The name of those unfortunate women," said Miss Elizabeth, "is added to drink, and is leading a lewd life.

Last night she went home drunk and cursing.

"I'm not a vagrant," said the young woman. "Last night I went to the drug store to get some medicine, and when I returned I found the language that was becoming a lady."

"She has only been out a few days," said Judge Taylor.

"You can go back for thirty days," said Judge Taylor.

"I won't," answered an elderly colored woman named Charlotte, "but she was charged with having used bad and language in a house," "Twa' Frank."

In the same house, Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell will have to pay the fine.

A small boy was in court to answer a charge of destroying private property. His name was John Morris. It was shown that he had broken the corners of the bricks of the house of Mr. W. C. Clegg, and the girl was sent to pay the fine.

Showed Fight, but Was Arrested.

John T. Page, a negro, some days ago stole a set of harness and a saddle from Robert Lasker's stable, and the police have been looking for him since he committed the theft. The negro appeared in the neighborhood of the market yesterday, and was found by the police. He was sent to prison for five months.
